Lamb Pool Report

The report on the club-sponsored lamb pool was one of the highlights of the meeting.

William Johnson, head of the sheep department of the Producers Stockyards where the pool sales are held, gave the figures which showed an increase over last year--something few lamb pools were able to accomplish.

The report showed that sheepmen sold $192,155 worth of lambs through the pool last year. The total was returned on 7,429 lambs with a total weight of 651,330

Robert Wilson was presented a trophy for marketing the fastest growing lambs sold through the pool. The award was for marketing 200 lambs, none of which graded lower than blue.

Johnson introduced Walter Finley, who started the lamb pool here, and Forrest Anders, who was described as the key to the success of the pool because of his accurate grading.

Glenn Eisenbarger of Springfield was the speaker of the evening who brought the program to its climax. His subject was "Don't Miss the Bus." In his talk, he brought out many homely truths as he described the different types of people who ride the bus of the world. He interspersed his philosophy with many humorous stories and his own experiences. In closing he advised his audience to look ahead, not backward, and "be sure to have the right resent the directors at the meeting driver." "Enter people's lives," he arged, "not just their pleasures, but their troubles as well."

chine. We are not in a world war. And there has been plenty of time in the last three or four years for the Pentagon to plan for efficiency in this building job at the smallest possible cost. We are told that the Army is refusing to give up its outmoded methods of years gone by. Modern lessons have not been well learned and too many people are assigned to the same jobs. This causes confusion and Congressmen want to know why more divisions cannot be made up of messengers, chauffeurs who drive generals, coal shovelers, men in service units of one kind or another. Members of Congress . . . are beginning to ask whether the armed services are wasting manpower while demanding more of it."

The crux of the problem can be expressed with a simple set of figures. In the Soviet army, there are nine men in supporting jobs for every 10 men in combat divisions. In the American army, by contrast, 26 men are now used in support units for each 10 men in combat divisions. Proportionately, in other words, the Russians have a lot more gun-carriers than we have.

Military men give an answer for this. Russia's supply routes are far shorter than ours. Secretary Marshall has said, "Our greatest drain is in these long hauls we are involved in, and the fact that all our policy is built on fighting outside this country."

After recounting other reasons set forth by the military high command, the U.S. News declares:

"Even so, the upshot of it is likely to be that Congress will tell the generals they must squeeze more front-line troops from the manpower they already have and the manpower they expect to get."

This problem, of course, is just one phase of the general military manpower problem. The present pool of draft eligibles will be army wants authority to draft 18-year olds, but Congress, apparently disturbed by letters from the constituents, is chary of this. It also doesn't want to take veterans, pert. even those of very short service. It wants many 4-F's to be inducted--but here the army is opposed. The Reserves are complaining of unfair treatment and discrimination, and this too has awakened Congressional interest and sympathy. Hearings in Capital Give Tip on Future

While the battle over air service to Ohio and Indiana cities goes on before the Civil Aeronautics Board (CAB) in the nation's capital, the people of Washington C. H. and Fayette County today could just sit back on the sidelines as spectators.

There was a time, five or six years ago, when the chamber of commerce's aviation committee was all steamed up over a similar hearing--but now now.

Interest in air service here reached its peak during the closing period of the last war and immediately after the country returned to peacetime recovery. It was at a time, too, when the Post Office Department was considering an airmail pick-up line that would serve a number of southern Ohio, Kentucky, West Virginia and Pennsylvania small cities.

The Chamber's committee and Fred Rost, the secretary then. made exhaustive studies of air service needs and potential and facilities. The Post Office Department's investigators were on the verge of instituting the service.

Then suddenly came the shock. Investigations by the Chamber committee failed to show any real need for air service here. And postal authorities called off plans for extending the airmail pickup service, even after it had been tentatively approved.

Airport Considered

The Chamber's investigations went so far as to consider several tracts for an airport. Experts were called in and plans for development and methods of financing with federal aid were studied. All this, too, went into the pigeon

In the last analysis, the committee reported to the Chamber that Washington Airpark, operated by Ray French on the Circleville Pike, provided ample air service with its private planes for charter.

The situation is still just about the same now as it was when the air service bubble burst about five

C. E. McCarley, executive secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said of the current CAB hearings "there just doesn't seem to be much interest here right

He then went on to explain that there are no facilities -- airport or big landing field -- here now and no money to establish them. He said the Chamber does not even have an aviation committee, primarily because there is no evidence that air service is needed here now.

Condition General

McCarley said he had attended some of the CAB hearings on air and had found that "the time is not yet right for air service" for them. This, he said, was general throughout the country with a few rare exceptions.

Although McCarley could see "not much chance or need" for air service here now, he said "things may be different five or ten years from now." And he gave the unmistakeable impression that when, and if, the time comes when air service is practical for cities of this size, the Chamber of Commerce would be ready to get back into the aviation picture.

In Washington, meanwhile, an airline attorney challenged the rulings of a CAB examiner in excluding evidence which he sought to offer in a case involving air service to many Indiana and

K. Robert Hahn of Indianapolis, attorney for Lake Central Airlines, Inc., served notice he will file a motion asking clarification of a board order on which the examiner based his rulings.

Local Service Case

In that order, issued last fall, the board declined to expand the scope of the "Indiana-Ohio local service case" into a complete study of the air transportation needs of the two cities.

It is reassuring, when you buy a Cadillac, to know that you yourself will make the decision as to how long you wish to keep it—and how far you wish to drive it. The car will be at your service throughout your pleasure.

Give it reasonable care and reasonable usage, and there is no practical limit to a Cadillac's utility. Authenticated records show various Cadillacs well into their second five hundred thousand miles of service.

Of course, the original owner seldom has any requirement for such exceptional mileage. Being progressive, he wishes to change his cars sufficiently often to keep pace with Cadillac's advancement in design and appearance.

But he benefits, all the same, from this wonderful capacity for service. It means that, month after month and year after year, his Cadillac performs magnificently -with the minimum of care and attention.

The great Cadillacs for 1951, now gracing America's streets and highways, are built in the finest traditions of Cadillac quality. If you have not inspected them, you ought to do so. We'd be happy to see you-at any time.

We are sorry indeed that delay in delivery of new Cadillacs continues unavoidable. Not only is the demand beyond all precedent, but much of the company's materials must, of necessity, be allocated to defense production. Thousands of Cadillac's craftsmen are already engaged in this effort. If you are waiting for a Cadillac, please be patient—but hold to your purpose. There is no substitute for the "Standard of the World."
